

Going for a walk

a walk to the fields, where we ran and played and laughed and rolled around and sat quietly.

2 years old, Parklands Playgroup - NORTHAMPTON (ENGLAND)

Every week the children at Parklands Playgroup went for a walk through the streets of Parklands to Bradlaugh Fields. On our way we talked about the houses, the streets and their names, the cars and the gardens. We spotted numbers on the houses and different front doors and windows. We stopped to sit in the sunshine to look around us. We took a map each so we didn't get lost and knew which way to go.

The children looked forward to our walks. They learnt to notice things as they walked passed-for example they noticed the shapes of the drain covers in the pavement. They looked for things they had noticed previously to see if they had changed. Those children that were quiet in Playgroup suddenly found their voice and chattered endlessly about what they had been doing.
